

Early Elementary Image Analysis Choice Board

Use pictures to complete the activities. Pictures can be photographs, illustrations, artwork, or even maps.

Describe what you see in the picture. What do you think about the things that you see?	List 3 questions you have about the picture. How might you find answers to your questions?	List the different shapes you see in the picture. List all of the objects in the picture that start with the letter “___”.	Fill in the questions and then answer them. How many _____ do you see in the picture? Point to or circle all of the _____ with _____.
Give the picture a title. Describe why you chose that title.	What story does the picture tell? Would you give the story a thumbs up or a thumbs down? Why?	Put yourself in the picture. Use your senses and describe what you see, hear, smell, touch, and taste.	What might have happened before this picture was taken? Why do you think so?
Imagine you are a person in this picture. What are you saying?	Imagine you are an object in this picture. What are you thinking?	If you could talk to someone or something in this picture, what would you say?	What might happen next in this picture? Why do you think so?
Find 2 pictures that are alike. Describe how they are the same and how they are different.	Find 3 images that are related in some way. Give clues to someone else to help them discover how they are alike.	List all of the _____ that you see. What makes these alike or unlike? How do they relate to the picture's story?	Describe the feeling of this picture. What details in the picture help to create this feeling?
Think about the picture as a story and write a review of it, just like a book review. Be sure to include your recommendation for “reading” this story or not.	What is the story that this picture tells? Why do you think that? What details in the picture support your story?	Imagine you are in this picture. Tell how you came into this picture, what happened while you were in it, and how or why you left.	In this picture, what if _____? Tell the story in the order that it happened.