

9/11/02

To the kids of 2012,

I would like to leave a letter to tell you how it felt on this day 1 year ago. By now it is probably in your history books. I'm a 17 year old junior, when this happened I was 16. I was sitting in my 2nd ~~per~~ period class. The principle went over the P.A. to tell us that the Twin Towers were hit. It was so shocking to hear that. Till that day I felt like many of the kids my age felt, our country ~~is~~ is impossible to hit. I felt we were invinsable. But Sept. 11, 2001 really opened my eyes. It was really scar after that day. Hearing that America was going to war! Hearing about the Alcaida, and Osama Binladen. That is one name I will never forget. We had the anthrax scare. But some good things did come out that sad day. America became a lot close for awhile it was hard buy or even find American Flags in stores, they were sold out for months. I manged ~~our~~ our flag hard to buy. In school the cliques didn't matter the popular were helping the unpopular. It brought families closer. In closing, yes 9/11/01 was a hard thing but "The sun showe on that cloudy day" Don't forget where you come from.
